HOW AMERICAN JEWS FELL IN LOVE WITH THE SECULAR STATE

A talk by

Kenneth Wald Professor Emeritus

Kenneth D. Wald was the first Samuel R. Shorstein Professor of American Jewish Culture and Society at UF from 2012–2016.

American Jews remain the most pro-Democratic white ethnic group in the United States, a puzzling phenomenon because they exhibit social traits usually associated with conservative and Republican loyalties. In trying to account for this pattern, Wald explores how concerns about the relationship between church and state became a central political priority of the American Jewish community.
